Japan's economy has long been described as network centric a web of stable reciprocated relations among banks firms and ministries is thought to play an important role in Japan's ability to navigate smoothly around economic shocks now those networks are widely blamed for Japan's faltering competitiveness this book applies structural sociology to a study of how the form and functioning of this network economy has evolved from the prewar era to the late 90s it asks whether in the face of deregulation globalization and financial disintermediation Japan's corporate networks the keiretsu groupings particularly have withered away losing their cohesion and their historical function of supporting member firms in hard times using detailed quantitative and qualitative analysis this book's conclusion is a qualified yes relationships remain central to the Japanese way of business but are much more subordinated to the competitive strategy of the enterprise than the network economy of the past

although scholars have emphasized the importance of women s networks for civil society in twentieth century japan women and networks in nineteenth century japan is the first book to tackle the subject for the contentious and consequential nineteenth century the essays traverse the divide when japan started transforming itself from a decentralized to a centralized government from legally imposed restrictions on movement to the breakdown of travel barriers and from ad hoc schooling to compulsory elementary school education as these essays suggest such changes had a profound impact on women and their roles in networks rather than pursue a common methodology the authors take diverse approaches to this topic that open up fruitful avenues for further exploration most of the essays in this volume are by japanese scholars their inclusion here provides either an introduction to their work or the opportunity to explore their scholarship further because women are often invisible in historical documentation the authors use a range of sources such as diaries letters and legal documents to reconstruct the familial neighborhood religious political work and travel networks that women maintained constructed or found themselves in sometimes against their will in so doing most but not all of the authors try to decenter historical narratives built on men s activities and men s occupational and status based networks and instead recover women s activities in more localized groupings and personal associations
